COURTEOUS READER,

AS I have constantly preferred publick Utility, to every other Motive, in the Choice of the Subjects inserted in my annual Labours, I am persuaded my filling up the Space allotted for the Preface this Year, with the following useful and approved Method of making HARD SOAP, will be much more agreeable than any Thing I could have produced from my own Invention.

I am thy obliged Friend,

R. SAUNDERS.

The Method of making HARD SOAP.

HARD SOAP is compounded of Wood-Ashes, Lime, Water, Tallow and Salt. The Process for making it is exceeding plain and easy, when certain unerring Rules are laid down for the Workman to know the Strength of his Lees; in order to which, take a small square Bottle, containing about four Ounces; make a Weight of Lead exactly counterpoising the Bottle; then filling the Bottle with Water, add, in the Weight Scale, as many small Shot as will ballance the Water; this done you are to suppose your Water to consist of 128 Parts, and divide your Shot accordingly; first divide them into two equal Parts, or $\frac{1}{2}$, then one of the Parts again; this 2d Division will be $\frac{3}{4}$, or $\frac{1}{4}$ of the Whole, the 3d Division $\frac{1}{8}$, or $\frac{1}{8}$ of the Whole; which is the first Weight made Use of in weighing Lees; therefore make a Weight exactly to this Standard; then divide your Shot a 4th, 5th, 6th and 7th Time, and make a Weight equal to each Division. This done, when a proper Quantity of Lees are drawn, in order to make them into Soap, have Recourse to your Bottle and Scales, to know what they weigh, and instead of putting in the Tallow, boil away the watery Part of the Lees, till they weigh $\frac{1}{2}$ Parts more than common Water (be cautious, in this Experiment, of breaking your Bottle, by weighing the Lees too hot) then charge what Quantity of Tallow you think proper; and when melted, damp the Fire, and let it lie all Night; in the Morning the Soap will appear, under the Scum, of a blackish Colour; and to know when a due Proportion of Lees (alkaline Salt) are properly added, when the Fire is stirred up, and the Soap begins to boil, take a very thin Knife, finely polished, the Blade about five Inches long, and near Half an Inch broad, dip this Knife into the Soap about two Inches, holding the Edge upwards; if it wants Lees, the Tail that drops from the Point of the Knife will appear as thick as a Thread, and seem full of little Knots, especially at the End; and the Soap on the Blade of the Knife will appear thin and watery, and on pressing the Flat of the Thumb to the Knife, drawing it back hastily, no Point of Soap will remain on your

On FORTITUDE.

WHERE real Fortitude inspires the Soul,
 Nor Death, nor Danger, can its Pow'r controul;
 However Fortune shift her fickle Scene,
 No Change can force it to be base or mean.
 In vain would Gold allure, or Fortune sway,
 The Friend to ruin, or the Trust betray,
 No Tyrant's Frown can Fortitude enthrall,
 It gains a ten-fold Lustre from its Fall ;

Its Vigour by Adversity refines ;
 The Jewel must be polish'd e'er it shines.
Camillus, Cato, each heroic Name,
 Tradition knows, derives from thence its Fame,
 Howe'er exalted, or how ever low ;
 An equal Dignity of Mind they show.
 In them ye little, mimick, Patriots view,
 What to your Country, to yourselves is due ;
 To brave the Menace, and to scorn the Bribe,
 Than Stars, or Ribbons, more adorns your Tribe ;

SELF-SUFFICIENCY exposed.

The Honour which Science and Genius confer, results not merely from literary Attainments, and the Talents of the Mind, but the good Use, made of them; for a Man may be adorned with the Knowledge of every Thing that is most curious and exquisite in the Sciences, and yet be a bad Man. This makes a Man learned, but does not make him good. And if a Man be only learned.

A P R I L. IV Month.

With waſting all my blooming Years,
In endleſs Toils, and Hopes, and Fears ,
How fondly longs my Soul to gain
The calm, uncrouded rural Scene !
To fly the Man, whoſe treach'rous Art,
Deludes the undeſigning Heart.
No Calumny, no pale-cheek'd Care,
No Envy ſhall attend me there.
There ſeated near a gliding Stream,
Intent on ſome inſpiring Theme,

On FRIENDSHIP.

|----|--------------|----|----|-----|----|--|
| 1 | Morn | 7 | 37 | 10 | 21 | It is necessary to procure Friends; but more necessary to reconcile ourselves with Enemies. As Hatred has a stronger and quicker Effect than Friendship; one Enemy may do us more Hurt than ten Friends can do us Good. And hence the common Saying is justified; "One Enemy is too much; and a hundred Friends too little." My Enemy may burn my House in an Hour; and my Friends not build it up in a Year: It is more prudent therefore to be reconciled with a little Enemy, than to procure a mighty Friend. Let an Enemy be ever so puny, he has a Sting. Besides, we are not to regard so much what a Man is, as what he may be. Experience shews, that many, whose Malice was despised, have made themselves felt, when Opportunity offered: Whence it is adviseable, to look upon the meanest Person, as one whose Help we may want some Time or other. |

 Of Joy and Sorrow, Health and Pain.
 Trust we to Youth, or Friends, or Pow'r,
 Fix we our Foot on Fortune's Ball,
 When most secure, the coming Hour,
 If he sees fit, may blast them all.
 When lowest sunk with Grief and Shame,
 Gorg'd with Affliction's deepest Cup,

On RIDICULE.

RIDICULE, says a learned Author, arises from Contempt, which being a selfish Passion, ought rather to be curbed than indulged; because there is no Passion whose Consequences are so pernicious as those of indulged Contempt; for the Opportunities of gratifying it are so frequent in Life, that it seems to be the chief Instrument of Discord: We proceed, says he, from Raillery to Railing, from Contempt to Hatred. The most ignorant are generally the most contemptuous, and they the most forward to deride, who are the most incapable to understand.---Thus, continues he, tho' Ridicule, under the severe Restrictions of Reason, may, on many Occasions, be a proper Instrument for discrediting known Folly, yet the Turn of Levity it gives to the Mind, the Distaste it raises to all rational Information, the Spirit of Animosity it is apt to excite, the Errors its false

NOVEMBER. XI Month.

Lost to Relations, Friends, and Fame,
 His pow'rful Arm can raise thee up.
 Before his Throne the Poor, oppress'd
 With stand'rous Rage, acquitted stand ;
 He guides the Exile to his Rest,
 And Country, in a foreign Land.
 His pow'rful Consolations cheer,
 His Smiles erect th' afflicted Head,
 His Hand can wipe away the Tear,
 That secret wets the widow'd Bed.

Yet all this while I do not speak against those Diversions that unbend the Mind. A Bow always bent is soon broken, and the Imbecillity of our Nature requires some Recreation. I blame only Incontinence, Luxury, and a superfluous Use of Meat and Drink. No Vice is more abominable than Intemperance, from whence all other Vices flow: Yet to those thou hast raised Altars, to these thou payest thy Vows. I wonder thou dost not fly the common Society of Mankind, to get rid of their continual Reproaches. Thou art either not a Man, or not my Son. Drunkennes has transformed thee, and, like that of Alexander the Great, has tarnished all thy Glory. The Delights of Capua enervated the Prowess of Hannibal. Whilst thou art drunk, O Marcus, thy Head turns round, thy Tongue falters, thy Eyes deceive thee, thy Feet fail thee, and thy Stomach offends thee. Wherefore, if thou art not altogether become stupid, thou must needs be sensible thyself of the Inconveniences of this Vice. My Cheeks burn with Shame, while I reprove thee for these Enormities, and my Mind is under Apprehension of contaminating itself by the bare naming them. Believe me, Marcus, Vice has got the Ascendant over thy Reason, and will not suffer thee to be sensible of thy Folly. It will not permit thee to look thro' the thick Fogs that envelope thy Brain, and conceals its own Deformity from thee. It keeps thee from discerning the Splendor of Virtue, and the Brightness of thy Race; if thou couldst but view the Beauties of Virtue, I am confident thou wouldst soon be in Love with her: No Heart can be so hardened, but must be affected by her Charms. The wide World cannot shew any thing more amiable. She is Praise to herself; and without her, Perfection would be nothing. She gains us, by her Authority, even the Love of our Enemies. The Sun once stopped his Course to admire her. Also Death itself, which nothing else can conquer, and which buries every thing in Oblivion, yet yields to her, and submits to that Immortality which is only acquired by her. Tell me, I beseech thee, my Son, what is become of all the ancient Greek Magnificence in Building? Is it not devoured by Time? Yet the Works of Virtue live, and will do so to all Eternity. Both the Names and Actions of virtuous Persons will endure the utmost Test of Time, and, thro' all the endless Revolutions of Ages, flourish. He need not to fear the Horrors of Death, O Marcus, who can be sure to outlive the Bounds of Life by his Virtue: Whilst thou, if thou continuest in this Sensuality of thine, as thou hast lived unregarded, will die unlamented, and rot in the Grave unremembered: Or if thou shouldst leave any Name behind thee, it will be devoted to Infamy, than which it were far better to have been condemned to Oblivion. That is but a foolish Opinion which some entertain, and which I daily reflect upon with Contempt and Disdain, that our Happiness ends with our Lives, and our Glory ceases with our Deaths. Those Men know not, that true Life begins at the Grave, and springs from the very Bosom of Death. Our Souls are Phoenixes, which revive from our own Ashes. Then are our Names eternized; then have Envy and Malice no more Power to obscure our Merits, or to dispute our Title with us to Fame. The Privileges of our Souls would be nothing, if they were subject to the Corruption of the Body. Now, Son Marcus, if thy Obstinacy will not give the Leave to lay hold on these Instructions; if thou wilt still continue thy Converse with Brutes, who have no other Sense than their Lusts; if, in a Word, thou wilt persist to forfeit mine and thy own Reputation, by thy ill Courses, I have no absolute Authority over thy Will, I can only satisfy myself in that I have thus far opposed thy vicious Inclinations. Farewell.---

ends

ECLIPSES, 1759.

THE Eclipses this Year are three, two of the Sun, and one of the Moon.

The First is an Eclipse of the Moon, visible here near 6 $\frac{1}{2}$ Digits, on Saturday, January 13, in the Morning.
